What this product covers

Global markets may include screened listed shares and exposure to gold, silver and oil. An asset class is not itself an investable transaction. Before an investor commits, the specific issuer or instrument, market, broker or counterparty and method of holding the exposure must be identified.

Selection and evidence

For shares, the proposed issuer and business activity should be reviewed against the stated screening method. For commodities, the documents should say whether the exposure involves an identified physical asset, a receivable or a market instrument, who owns it and how delivery or settlement occurs. An investor should be able to inspect the applicable order, contract note, custody or title record and transaction statement.

Profit calculation

Norvel Capital retains 35% of verified net profit after expenses as the company's share. This is not an investor return. The investor's distribution is determined by the signed product agreement, which must specify the calculation period, supporting records, reporting dates and how any alternative sharing model applies.

Principal and liquidity

The product page allows a request to return principal after the stated minimum period. A request does not mean assets can be sold immediately or that principal is protected. Settlement depends on the instrument, market access and the agreed process; an investor needs the notice, valuation and payment procedure in writing.

Main risks

Share prices and commodity values can fall. Currency movements, market closures, broker or counterparty failure, settlement delays and an unsuccessful screening review can change the outcome. Losses may reduce or eliminate both profit and capital. Historical illustrations are not a promise of future results.

Before participation

Request the named instrument or asset, screening basis, ownership and custody chain, transaction costs, profit calculation, exit procedure and applicable signed agreement. The site overview alone does not authorise a trade or create an investment contract.
